BODY:

Does this sound familiar?

You go to bed hours late, exhausted, feeling that familiar tension at the base of your skull.

Every time you look at the clock, an hour has gone by.

Then you thought, “If I go to sleep right NOW, I’ll get five and a half hours of sleep.”

That was two hours ago.

You wake up with the realization that the tension has spread, and your entire head is throbbing.

“How am I ever going to get anything done feeling like this?” you wonder.

You do manage to get a few very minor things finished, but your To-Do list is staring you in the face, taunting you, even as more things get added.

You work late, eat a hurried dinner out of a vending machine, and get home hours past your ideal bedtime.

Finally, you lay down in bed and glance at the clock, and think, “If I go to sleep right NOW, I’ll get five hours of sleep...”

Guess what? You CAN get off the treadmill. The answer is simple, measurable, and sustainable.

Let me tell you what the answer is NOT.

- The answer is NOT about working harder
- The answer is NOT about hiring an assistant or paying money for help
- The answer is NOT some “woo-woo feel good and the answers will come” nonsense
